Reviewers are invited to suggest improvements to the submitted papers through the above reported form. Reviewers are asked to communicate immediately to editors in the case they do not feel qualified to review the manuscript. Moreover, they must identify any relevant mistake or omission in the citations.

Authors are required to provide, in their manuscripts, sufficient details and references to permit others to replicate the work. In addition, authors are required, if asked by referees, to provide data and information used to create their manuscripts for verification purposes. Submission, by an author, of a manuscript concurrently to more than one journal represents an unethical publishing behavior.

Manuscripts are expected to bring an empirical and/or theoretical contribution to research and knowledge. Authors should clarify the premises at the basis of their creation in case of possible conflict of interests. Every statement, included in the submitted papers, arising from personal conversations, can be reported solely with an explicit permission of the involved parties. If an author discovers, after the publication of the paper, a fundamental mistake, it must notify Geoprogess that will promptly publish an errata corrige note. Authors are responsible for misconducts and fraudulent behaviours.

Papers not approved for publication will not be exploited to get any advantage by editors and by Geoprogess Association in general; submitted manuscripts are treated as confidential documents. Editors and Geoprogess will take responsive measures if ethical concerns are raised with regard to the submitted and published papers. Every unethical publishing act will be carefully investigated and immediately reported when discovered.
